Designed by us. Made yours.

The Lexicon Collection puts you in the designer's seat, giving you the freedom to create a pendant that feels considered for your home.

Choose from a collection of materials, colours, shade shapes and metallic details to create a combination that complements your interior. Draw inspiration from the finishes already within your space — stone benchtops, timber cabinetry, flooring, tapware or handles — and use your lighting to bring them together.

From natural travertine and warm timber to concrete and contemporary metal finishes, Lexicon makes it easy to create a more cohesive look while still adding your own personality.

How to create your Lexicon

Our customising tool makes building your pendant simple. Work through each step and watch your selections come together.

1. Choose your suspension

Start with the material you want to anchor your design. This is a great opportunity to reference a major finish already in your room — choose travertine to connect with a stone benchtop, timber to complement cabinetry or flooring, or a classic metal finish for a cleaner, more understated look.

2. Choose your shade

Next, select the shape and finish that gives your pendant its personality. Consider both the scale of your space and the look you want to create. Clear glass feels light and open, while solid and more sculptural shades can create a stronger statement.

3. Add your detail ring

Finish your design with a decorative ring. This small detail is an easy way to reference other accents within the room — think tapware, cabinet handles, appliances or other lighting — helping the entire space feel more connected.

Need some inspiration?

A simple way to begin is to look around your room and choose two finishes you already love.

Let the suspension connect with a dominant material such as stone, timber or cabinetry, then use the detail ring to reference your metal finishes. From there, choose the shade that best suits your style and the scale of your space. There’s no single right combination. Lexicon is designed to give you the freedom to experiment, personalise and create a light that feels at home in your home.
